ENERGY MARKETERS OF AMERICA EMAI

Energy Marketers of America (EMA) has a valuable program for any organization responding to emergencies or disasters in the United States.

Fuel marketers are front and center in providing fuel to their communities on a daily basis, and when disaster strikes, they are ready to respond nationally. While most people are hunkering down to ride out a disaster, fuel marketers are preparing to deliver fuel where it is needed, and as quickly as possible. Fuel delivery is critical for providing emergency services, restoring utilities, and rebuilding after disasters.

As a premier national trade association representing fuel marketers, we have created a program to connect companies and organizations responding to disasters. Fuel delivery is paramount for successful disaster response, and our EMA Disaster Fuel Response Program marketer members are available to provide that service.

We founded the EMA Disaster Fuel Response Program where we provide information of marketers who are willing to deliver fuel to utilities, government agencies, first responders, medical facilities, companies and organizations that respond to disasters.

EMA has recruited and will always provide an up to date list of marketers to choose from.

You directly choose the marketer that best fits the mission.

You negotiate fees and services directly with the marketer chosen.

We have EMA members from all over America who have joined the program and are prepared to respond to the next emergency or disaster. If you represent a large business and would like access to this great program, please submit the "Sign me up as an EMA Platinum Corporate Partner" form. Becoming a Platinum Corporate Partner allows you to access the benefits of EMA membership including the benefits of the EMA Disaster Fuel Response Program.

If you are a government or small to mid-size business, please contact Sherri Stone at 703-472-7980 or ssone@emamerica.org to participate at no cost.

Sincerely,

Sam Bell

Disaster Response Director,
